William Hogarth of El Paso is a business visitor in the city.

Frank Williams, a Kelvin mining man, is transacting business in Globe.

F. F. Lee of Peoria, Ill., is a recent arrival in the city for a business visit.

Clint L. Farmer of Waco, Texas, was an arrival on last evening's train on a business visit.

C. O. Stephen, the Fort Thomas business man, accompanied by his son, is in the city on business.

M. McCarthy, general manager of the Globe Consolidated company, has gone to El Paso on a business visit.

E. M. White, manager of the Warrior Copper company, is transacting business in the city. Mr. White is also postmaster at Black Warrior, the postoffice having been recently established.

Thomas Kavanaugh and family arrived in the city last evening from Tempe and are at the Dominion hotel. Mr. Kavanaugh was one of the fortunate claim owners who figured in the big Ray mining deal, and received the lion's share of the money.

Judge James T. Hale of Duluth and his son, Paul M. Hale, arrived in the city last evening to spend a few days looking over the Globe mining district. Judge Hale is a prominent stockholder of the Globe Consolidated and is also interested in other Globe district properties.

W. G. Rice, secretary and treasurer of the Superior & Boston company, leaves this morning for Paradise, where he will attend a meeting of the Manhattan Development company and also to inspect the properties of the San Simon Copper company, in which he is interested. From there he will return to his home at Houghton, Mich.

ALL LOOK FOR DISAGREEMENT

was the St. George who was going out in the world seeking maidenhood.
"Taking up the testimony of the defense's medical witnesses, one by one, Jerome passed lightly over that given by Dr. Wiley of Pittsburgh, and practically ignored it altogether. Of Dr. Binghamman, the Thaw family physician, he spoke in highest respect.
"This physician who frankly tells you he is a general practitioner," Jerome continued, "who is not a hired expert, testified that when Thaw was a child he had all the ailments incidental to childhood. He tells you he was called in to attend to Thaw in the latter part of 1904 and found him depressed and nervous. That was only natural."
Ought to Be Depressed
"Any man who had the interviews Thaw had with the girl he loved, saw her go to a hated rival and make the affidavit she did, would be depressed and dejected.
"Now, as to Mr. Deemar, he merely testified that Thaw was nervous—that was all. Evans told you Thaw suffered from exaggerated ego. That is merely another name for vanity. Dr. Binghamman when asked about it said Thaw merely had a great opinion of himself.
"Evans told you that Thaw had had a brain storm; a better term would be 'paranoia' or 'a millionaire.' No one ever heard of brain storm before Evans wanted to make of it a classic phrase. Well, he at least succeeded in making it known the world over. For two days you will recall we tried to find a definition for brain storm, but could find none.
"We were told that Thaw was like a rudderless ship which lost its balance wheel, cast off from moorings and the nearest we get to a definition was mental fulmination or psychic explosion.
"Men of this jury, there is in this case every element of the simple, vulgar, everyday tenderloin homicide. If the defendant were any person but the rich Harry K. Thaw of Pittsburgh; if he were the son of a padrone in Elizabeth street, and if Stanford White were not a leading architect, but a Chinaman in Mott street; if this girl were a chorus girl in a Bowery theater, how long would the brain storm or paranoia theory be listened to?
Same Old Cause
"There were two ordinary men in this case and between them was a tigers' urging them on. With Thaw she was seduced by White; with White she was a victim of Thaw's perversion. Why, men, there are the same old elements here that have made criminal history ever since the world began.
"Is there anything in all this evidence to show that when Thaw killed White he did not know the nature or quality of his act or that the act was wrong?
Jerome reviewed the letters Thaw wrote from Paris to Pittsburgh to Attorney Longfellow. He declared that the letters showed all through the writer's appreciation of legal rights and wrongs.
"They are nothing more," he continued, "than the erratic, vulgar productions of an illiterate who always had his own way in life until he was locked up in the city prison."
Cowardly Fear of Death
The will and codicil were next taken up. The will showed "cowardly fear of death," declared the prosecutor, but nothing more.
"So you see it was very easy for such a cowardly man as this Thaw to withhold dementia Americana for three years and then kill his victim, who could not see his approach.
"Where is the delusion in the will? Did he leave the money to the right people? Everyone of these experts admitted that at the time of the killing Thaw had knowledge of what he was doing, but said it was an insane knowledge. They could not tell the difference between sane and insane knowledge, but said the only knowledge that Thaw had was insane—He ruined my wife. There was nothing said about Providence until after the consultation with Dr. Evans. In these words was expressed the motive for the crime. But there was nothing there and was nothing about anything he did that night. When he got to the station he gave a fictitious name. That was not an insane man, or an agent of Providence, or a man chosen of God to avenge woman—that was not glorying in a righteous act.
No Right to Free Thaw
"But when this defendant presented to you that he was supposed to avenge American womanhood, American virtue—this champion who had lain dormant three years—until he becomes in some way exalted, it does not come within the classification of dementia Americana. He killed for a motive and when you are asked to acquit such a man you are asked to give something which you have not the power to bestow.
"The real question here is whether New York is to become a mining camp. If this sort of thing can go on; if the only thing between a citizen and an enemy is a brain storm, then every man had better pack a gun.
"Delmas appealed to the scriptures. Let me, too, direct your attention to them, to what the Lord said: 'Vengeance is mine; I shall repay.'
"Let me also remind you of that great fundamental law sounded down the ages, the commandment of God—'Thou shalt not kill.'
Jerome then sat down. Justice Fitzgerald ordered twenty-five minutes recess before beginning his charge to the jury.

Returns from Bisbee

Charles Nesbitt returned last evening from Bisbee, where he went to bury his brother Sam, who, with his mining partner, was burned to death near Packard's station last Friday. Mr. Nesbitt is not entirely satisfied that the tragedy was the result of an accident, although he could base his opinion on nothing absolutely tangible. Mr. Nesbitt states that when he left Bisbee there was considerable excitement owing to the impending strike and that it could not be said with any degree of certainty what effect it would have on the camp.

Running Races April 26

A race meet will be pulled off at the track at Miami Flats on April 26 and Globe lovers of horsemanship will have an opportunity of witnessing some exciting races. Jeff Dunegan of Clifton has already sent five sprinters here and several horses are expected from San Angelo, Texas. Mr. Dunegan won a handicap match race at El Paso a few days ago and entering horsemen who lost were not satisfied with the result. The park at El Paso could not be secured on account of the opening of the ball season and as several business men of this city were willing to offer good purses, it was decided to come here.
